The President of the United States takes pleasure in presenting the SILVER STAR MEDAL to

FIRST LIEUTENANT CARL C. GABEL,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Quartermaster and Shore Party Commander of the Twenty-third Marines, Fourth Marine Division, during operations against enemy Japanese forces on Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, from 19 February to 16 March 1945. Landing with the advance elements of the Regimental Headquarters on 19 February, First Lieutenant Gabel found the supply and evacuation facilities of the Shore Party completely disrupted due to continuous enemy fire and, voluntarily assuming responsibility for the operation of the beach, initiated its immediate reorganization. Working for more than eighty-five hours without rest under conditions which made the entire beach practically untenable, he utilized inexperienced personnel and remnants of various units of the original Shore Party and conducted the numerous activities of the beach, thereby effecting adequate supply and efficient evacuation for his own Regiment and its attached units. Continuously exposed to hostile fire, he aided in saving the lives of many casualties and in providing all the vital supplies required for advancing the attack during its most critical stage. His initiative, courage and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

PRIVATE FIRST CLASS FRANK GABODA,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with the Second Battalion, Twenty-Fifth Marines, Fourth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Saipan, Marianas Islands, 10 July 1944. During an attack against the last desperate pocket of Japanese resistance on the island's northern shores, Private First Class Gaboda effectively covered the platoon advance with his Browning automatic rifle, boldly moving ahead of the unit through terrain which afforded ideal cover to the enemy and personally accounting for at least twenty Japanese before he fell, mortally wounded by a sniper while leading his group across an exposed position. By his aggressive determination and courageous fighting spirit, Private First Class Gaboda had pressed forward an attack which contributed materially to the success of our vital mission on this island, and his unwavering devotion to duty was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life for his country."

When the platoon to which his squad was attached was ordered to withdraw after a bitter fire fight lasting approximately an hour, Corporal Gaines saw that his unit had been cut off from the platoon by enemy fire and separated from his company by a road which was covered by intense hostile machine-gun, mortar and rifle fire. Calmly and skillfully, he deployed his squad to the best cover available. Voluntarily crossing the road twice, Corporal Gaines reconnoitered a possible route of escape and, on the third crossing, led his entire unit, including three wounded men, to safety. By his initiative and courage, he averted possible heavy casualties, and his valiant leadership was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

When his ship was attacked by a hostile suicide plane, Corporal Galey remained at his gun to direct continuous fire against the attacking aircraft until it struck his vessel near his gun station. He then immediately proceeded to the scene of the damage. Quickly leading out a fire hose, he directed a stream of water on the resulting fire in less than a minute and aided materially in bringing the flames under control. Later, he entered the wreckage through a hole caused by the explosion and, despite the great personal danger involved, evacuated several wounded comrades. During the following twenty-four hour period, Corporal Galey worked tirelessly with repair parties in controlling damage, pumping out flooded compartments and clearing away debris. Mr. Wendell N. Garden
Norfolk, Nebraska

Dear Mr. Garden:

I have the honor to inform you that you have been awarded the decoration indicated below:

Silver Star Medal for gallantry displayed in action on 13 April 1942, on Corregidor, Philippine Islands.

This decoration together with the citation will be forwarded to the Commanding Officer, Fifth Army, Chicago, Illinois. He will select an officer to present the decoration to you. The officer selected will communicate directly with you and will arrange the ceremony in accordance with your wishes and convenience.

Sincerely yours,

EDWARD F. WITSELL
Major General
The Adjutant General

Commandant
United States Marine Corps
Washington 25, D. C.

CITATION FOR SILVER STAR

Staff Sergeant Wendell N. Garden, United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, he readily volunteered, although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire, to rescue his comrades. Disregarding the imminent danger of collapsing walls and roofs, Sergeant Garden heroically entered the tunnels, assisted in extricating trapped soldiers, and gave first aid to the wounded.

SECOND LIEUTENANT ARTHUR B. GARDNER, JR., USMCR.,
for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while attached to the First Marine Division during combat against enemy Japanese forces on Cape Gloucester, New Britain, January 2, 1944. When his platoon became pinned down at a river crossing by heavy enemy machine-gun fire from well-concealed emplacements which inflicted serious casualties, Second Lieutenant Gardner unhesitatingly made his way forward over difficult terrain to assist in extricating his men. Courageously remaining exposed to hostile fire, with utter disregard for his own personal safety, he succeeded in withdrawing his command to a position of safety before he himself was fatally injured. Second Lieutenant Gardner's determined leadership and selfless devotion to duty in the face of grave peril were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. Encountering heavy fire from an enemy-held ridge during an attack, Second Lieutenant Garland moved ahead and repeatedly exposed himself to the hostile fire to lead his men forward until the enemy position was overrun and destroyed. Observing that the leader of an adjacent platoon was wounded, he immediately took charge, skillfully organizing and directing the men to advantageous positions from which they could fire upon the Japanese. Shortly afterward, while pinned down by a heavy enemy artillery and mortar barrage, he supervised the withdrawal of both units and constantly braved the hostile fire to assist in the evacuation of numerous casualties. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as an Automatic Rifleman, serving with Company H, Third Battalion, Twenty-sixth Marines, Fifth Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces at Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, on 7 March 1945. When his squad came under intense enemy machine-gun and ~~area~~-mortar fire during an advance against a hostile pillbox, Private First Class Gatton unhesitatingly exposed himself to the devastating barrage in an effort to gain a more advantageous position for supporting his squad's attack. Moving his weapon to commanding ground and opening fire on the Japanese, he remained steadfast despite the enemy's concentrated efforts to drive him from his controlling position and, although grenades continued to explode throughout the area, maintained his fire against the attackers until they were forced to withdraw. By his daring initiative, indomitable fighting spirit and aggressive determination in the face of overwhelming odds, Private First Class Gatton contributed to the success of his squad in destroying a knee-mortar and a machine-gun nest without casualty, and his valiant devotion to duty throughout the furious engagement reflects the highest credit upon himself and the United States Naval Service."

PRIVATE FIRST CLASS BILL GILLETT,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with Company B, First Battalion, Eighteenth Marines (Engineer), Second Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Tinian, Marianas Islands, 2 August 1944. Rallying the men about him when ammunition was low and relief and supply seemed hopeless during an attack on his battalion, Private First Class Gillett rendered valuable service and, armed with an automatic rifle, exercised excellent fire discipline to hold his fire until he was able to kill many hostile officers and non-commissioned officers. Though he was severely wounded during the last of three hostile attacks, he assisted materially in repelling this assault and, by his courage, initiative and zealous devotion to duty throughout upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with a Company of the First Battalion, Twenty-seventh Marines, Fifth Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, on 14 March 1945. When his company was forced to withdraw temporarily from intense hostile fire during an assault against heavily fortified installations on a ridge to its front, Private First Class Glading observed a seriously wounded Marine unable to move. Boldly leaving his position, he crept forward to the front lines in the face of heavy automatic fire until he reached the wounded man. After cutting the radio from his comrade's back, he quickly threw four or five grenades which silenced a Japanese machine gun emplacement and, during the enemy's momentary confusion, began dragging the wounded man toward friendly lines. When he had carried the casualty as far as he could, Private First Class Glading stealthily crawled away and fearlessly exposed himself to draw enemy fire on himself, thereby enabling others to move the wounded man to safety. He then aided in rendering first aid and in procuring a litter team before returning to his gun. By his courageous initiative and unselfish concern for the life of another, Private First Class Glading upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Waging an attack against a heavily fortified enemy position, First Lieutenant Goldberg was ordered to move his platoon forward to fill a gap in the company front which was open to hostile counterattack. Pinned down with his platoon by withering rifle and machine-gun fire as he initiated an advancing maneuver, he unhesitatingly moved forward of his men and, defying the intense concentration of gunfire, led his forces into a strategic position, thereby enabling them to fill the gap. Although fatally wounded during the fierce exchange of hostilities, First Lieutenant Goldberg, by his valiant leadership and devotion to duty, had contributed materially to the success of the attack and his unfaltering courage in the face of tremendous odds reflects the highest credit upon himself and the United States Naval Service. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Leader of a Machine Gun Section of Company F, Second Battalion, Twenty-second Marines, Sixth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on the Island of Okinawa Shima, Ryukyu Group, 14 May 1945. Blanketed by a terrific concentration of enemy fire which inflicted heavy casualties during the advance platoon's assault on Sugar Loaf Hill, Corporal Golar was ordered by his platoon leader to withdraw from a temporarily established machine-gun position. Requesting and receiving permission to select certain men and remain on the line covering the withdrawal of the remnants of the platoon, he fought a valiant battle and, after an orderly withdrawal had been effected, courageously insisted on standing by with the platoon leader to cover the retirement of the last few machine gunners. Maintaining a steady stream of fire against the Japanese until he fell, mortally wounded, Corporal Golar materially assisted in the evacuation of his platoon from the field of battle and, by his heroic actions and self-sacrificing devotion to his comrades, valiantly upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Company Runner, serving with Company A, First Battalion, Twenty-Seventh Marines, Fifth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, on 13 March 1945. Courageously disregarding his own shrapnel wounds, Private Goldblatt directed the removal of wounded Marines from an advanced area swept by terrific Japanese mortar and sniper fire and, leaving the litter team safe in the defiladed area, again crawled forward to the front. Quickly locating additional casualties, he was returning to the litter team when struck a second time by hostile sniper fire. Fully aware of his serious condition, he managed to work his way back to his unit where, fighting unconsciousness and ignoring his mortal wounds, he explained to his men the safest route of advance and how best to evacuate the wounded. When our forces sustained heavy casualties during an attack against a fiercely defended enemy deeply entrenched on a heavily fortified, rock-studded ridge, Private First Class Goldstein unhesitatingly risked his life in a vallant attempt to rescue Marines who had been wounded during the fierce action and, voluntarily penetrating a valley swept by shattering mortar, artillery and machine-gun fire, assisted in carrying the wounded men over a steep cliff and back to safety. On this date, Private First Class Good was working alongside and guiding a tractor in constructing a tank road through a narrow gulch which contained several enemy caves and strong points. When he had directed the tractor about half way through the gulch to a point thirty yards in front of our lines, the enemy in one of the caves threw several satchel charges of explosives at the tractor. Although knocked down and stunned by the explosion of these charges, Private First Class Good quickly regained his feet and, with complete disregard for his own safety, continued to direct the operation of the tractor until the road was completed. When his platoon encountered a strong enemy force on a heavily-defended hill, Second Lieutenant Goode braved heavy hostile machine-gun and rifle fire which had already caused the death of one of his men and wounded two others, to bring forward a machine-gun section. Accurately spotting positions for the guns, he brought direct fire to bear upon the enemy with the result that twenty of the enemy were killed and the platoon was allowed to advance. Pinned down by intense hostile machine-gun and rifle fire from a strong enemy position later that same day, he again braved hostile fire to return to his support squad for assistance and, courageously leading this group to an effective position, directed accurate fire on the enemy's flank, thereby forcing them to withdraw. His coolness under fire, initiative and daring leadership were contributing factors in the annihilation of many of the enemy and in saving the lives of many of his men. PRIVATE FIRST CLASS EUGENE M. GOSPODAREK,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Member of a Wire Team of Company D, First Battalion, Second Marines, Second Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces at Tarawa, Gilbert Islands, on 21 November 1943. When our assaulting units gained the center of the airstrip during the early morning following a furious battle with the fanatic Japanese on D-Day, Private First Class Gospodarek fearlessly accompanied his wire team across the fire-swept area and assisted in the expeditious establishment and subsequent maintenance of the only wire communication from the forward assault companies to the Battalion Command Post and the 81-mm. mortar platoon, tirelessly carrying on despite the tremendous odds during our sustained drive across the landing field to the south coastline of the island. By his daring aggressiveness, indomitable fighting spirit and cool courage in the face of grave danger, Private First Class Gospodarek contributed materially to the success of our operations against this vital hostile stronghold and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Member of a Machine Gun Squad of Company C, First Battalion, Twenty-fifth Marines, Fourth Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Saipan, Marianas Islands, 15 June 1944. Reaching the initial objective after landing on the beach on D-Day, Private First Class Green encountered bitter hostile resistance and, realizing that a machine gun was urgently needed at the objective, returned sixteen hundred yards to the beach and with a companion located a heavy machine gun and ammunition. Braving intense enemy artillery and mortar fire, he and his comrade carried out three successful trips to the beach, placed the machine gun in a firing position on the front line and, during the night, killed at least nine of the Japanese and were largely instrumental in repelling a determined hostile counterattack and in holding the beachhead. By his courage and bold initiative, Private First Class Green contributed materially to the success of our operations against this heavily fortified Japanese stronghold, and his indomitable fighting spirit throughout reflects the highest credit upon himself and the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with the First Battalion, Twenty-First Marines, Third Marine Division, during the occupation of enemy Japanese-held Guam Island in the Marianas, on 25 July 1944. Undaunted by the merciless rain of bullets when his unit was temporarily slowed down by a sudden concentration of shattering machine-gun fire, Platoon Sergeant Greene unhesitatingly placed himself in the lead with his platoon guide and shouting encouragement to his men as he fearlessly defied the deadly volleys from concealed Japanese positions, continued the bold assault over a dangerously exposed strategic ridge commanding the Asan-Adelup beachhead. Forging ahead in the face of the pounding enemy barrage, he succeeded in reaching his objective before he fell, mortally wounded by a savage burst from a Japanese gun. An indomitable fighter, Platoon Sergeant Greene, by his forceful leadership, determined aggressiveness and great personal valor throughout five days of bitter combat on this fiercely contested base, contributed essentially to the ultimate reconquest of the vital stronghold, and his unwavering devotion to duty reflects the highest credit upon himself, his brave comrades and the United States Naval Service. EXTRACT
XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX

7 February, 1942.

Awards of Silver Star

Under the provisions of Army Regulations 600-45, War Department, August 8, 1932, the Silver Star is awarded by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces in the Far East, for gallantry in action to the following named officers and enlisted men of the United States Army Forces in the Far East:

CHARLES R. GREER, Private First Class, Fourth Marines. For gallantry in action at Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on December 29, 1941. Early during a severe aerial bombardment and strafing attack by a large force of enemy aircraft, two men wounded by bomb fragments were loaded into a truck for dispatch to the hospital, and abandoned by the driver when another wave of enemy bombers appeared overhead. Observing the hazard to which the wounded men were exposed, Private First Class Greer promptly volunteered to drive the truck to the hospital. Disregarding falling bombs and hostile aerial machine gunning enroute and concerned primarily with the completion of his volunteer mission, the wounded were delivered to the hospital forthwith, and medical officers made available. The gallant and prompt action of this marine, accompanied by an officer and another marine, saved the two casualties from the likelihood of additional injuries and possible death.

By command of General MacArthur:

R. K. SUTHERLAND,
Major General, GSC,
Chief of Staff.

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as an Automatic Rifleman of Company A, First Battalion, Seventh Marines, First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Peleliu, Palau Islands, 16 September 1944. While his squad was maneuvering into position to assault one entrance of a hostile pillbox, Private First Class Grove suddenly observed a group of twelve Japanese, led by an officer brandishing his saber, rush from another entrance of the pillbox toward the exposed flank of the squad. Quickly standing up, he opened fire with his automatic rifle and succeeded in annihilating the entire group, thereby saving the lives of many of his comrades and contributing materially to the annihilation of a determined and strongly-entrenched enemy. His quick-witted initiative, skill and courageous devotion to duty reflect great credit on Private First Class Grove and the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Member of Headquarters and Service Company, Second Marines, Second Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Tarawa, Gilbert Islands, from 20 to 24 November 1943. Skilled and aggressive during fierce combat against a deeply entrenched enemy in the central sector of Betio Island, Private First Class Grunnel fought furiously and without rest throughout three days and nights of bitter offensive action, contributing materially to the success of his unit in wiping out many Japanese emplacements. On one occasion, he boldly proceeded to the gun port of a hostile strong point and, despite the enemy's incessant shellfire, destroyed the entrenchment with well-placed demolitions and grenade fire, then entered the area and killed the remaining personnel. Again risking his life in a subsequent engagement, he fearlessly exposed himself to withering hostile fire to gain an advantageous position for covering the advance of a companion to the entrance of an enemy-held position. His daring initiative, great personal valor and tireless devotion to the completion of each perilous mission served as an inspiration to our troops and reflect the highest credit upon the United States Naval Service."

When his company was assaulting the heavily fortified and defended Hill 382 which had withstood the attacks of other units for three days, Captain Grussendorf skillfully utilized tanks, artillery, rockets and automatic weapons to enable his unit to advance more than four hundred yards in the face of intense enemy opposition and occupy this key terrain feature commanding a view of the northern portion of the island. With his company reduced to half its original strength during the period from 6 to 11 March, he again conducted a sustained assault over extremely difficult terrain, and enabled his unit to become the first to reach the sea, thereby securing the zone against fierce enemy opposition and counterattack. During an attack along the beach in the northwestern sector of the island, Private Guerrero's company was pinned down by intense hostile machine-gun, rifle and mortar fire which inflicted heavy casualties. The Japanese, strongly entrenched along the beach, held the high ground on the company's right flank and the situation necessitated the use of tanks to aid his company in its attack. After the tanks arrived, Private Guerrero volunteered to guide the vehicles to a position from which they could fire on the enemy and, despite the extreme danger involved while exposed to heavy enemy mortar and sniper fire, boldly proceeded alone to an area in front of the tanks and skillfully directed their fire on the hostile emplacements, thereby aiding greatly in their destruction.
