in presenting the SILVER STAR MEDAL to

SERGEANT JOHN V. LA BARBERA,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as Sergeant Guide of Company B, First Battalion, Fifth Marines, First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Peleliu, Palau Islands, 26 and 27 September 1944. Leading the right flank of his platoon forward after his platoon leader had been killed by a burst of hostile fire, Sergeant La Barbera pushed ahead to secure the top of a hill commanding the area and, with the acting platoon leader, organized a strong defense of this vital sector. Subsequently driven down the forward slopes by enemy opposition, he again proceeded forward with the right flank of his platoon. Pinned down on an open flat by Japanese automatic rifle fire from a cave in the side of the hill, he directed the return fire of his squad against the hostile emplacement and, although seriously wounded in the hand and arm during the fierce fire fight, courageously continued in his gallant efforts until tanks and flame throwers were brought up and the enemy-held cave destroyed. By his courage, initiative and devotion to duty throughout, Sergeant La Barbera upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Machine Gun Section Leader of Company K, Third Battalion, First Marines, First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Peleliu, Palau Islands, on 15 and 16 September 1944. When his rifle platoon was pinned down by intense hostile fire from forward Japanese pillboxes, Sergeant LaBerge skillfully maneuvered his section to an advantageous position to deliver extremely effective fire and neutralize the enemy positions, thereby making it possible for his platoon to move forward and evacuate casualties. Although wounded himself during this encounter, he continued to hold this precarious position until it became untenable. On the night of 16 September, still refusing evacuation, he held a position on the extreme left flank against a fierce enemy counter-attack and despite a second severe wound, remained at his post until the Japanese had been annihilated. His outstanding courage and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as a Gunner in a Machine-Gun Squad serving with the First Battalion, Twenty-Fifth Marines, Fourth Marine Division, during the assault and occupation of enemy Japanese-held Saipan in the Marianas Islands, from 15 June to 12 July 1944. When his squad leader was killed by a sudden burst of Japanese machine-gun fire from a concealed position while investigating a series of caves in a cliff on 12 July, Private First Class LaBombard immediately ordered the remainder of the squad to a protected firing position and fearlessly advanced in the open toward the cliff until the enemy again opened fire. With the hostile position thus exposed, he directed his rifle fire against the emplacements and succeeded in killing three Japanese before he fell, mortally wounded. By his aggressive initiative and resolute spirit of self-sacrifice, Private First Class LaBombard enabled his squad to locate and overcome an obstinate point of resistance, thereby contributing materially to the crushing of the enemy's final struggles in this area. When his platoon was suddenly subjected to hostile rifle and mortar fire which inflicted three casualties during an attack over extremely rough terrain along a pinnacled ridge, Private Lacavera immediately ran forward through hostile fire to an advantageous position and delivered effective fire on enemy emplacements. After all his ammunition was expended, he ran to one of the wounded Marines, secured an automatic rifle and again brought fire to bear on the enemy, killing eight Japanese soldiers and neutralizing one mortar. By his coolness under fire and relentless fighting spirit, Private Lacavera enabled his platoon to continue its attack, thereby permitting his wounded comrades to be evacuated. Corporal Ladd, with complete disregard for his own safety and with bombs falling in the area, guided a group of Army personnel to an air raid shelter. He then entered the native church and induced some forty natives to leave the church and follow him to their village, where he dispersed them into slit trenches and along the ground just a moment before a direct bomb hit demolished the church. Returning to the Army area, he found two seriously wounded soldiers, applied tourniquets to stop their bleeding, and started with them for medical aid. During the next forty hours, he stationed himself on the most fiercely contested points of the line and, by his splendid example of leadership, inspired his men to repel every attempted counterattack. During the afternoon of 14 June, he went forward in the face of heavy hostile rifle and machine-gun fire to aid one of his men who had been wounded while forward of the lines, and succeeded in carrying the stricken man to a place of relative safety. From: The Commanding Officer.
To: The Commanding Officer, Fourth Marines.
Subject: Recommendations for award of Silver Star.

1. On 25 March, 1942, when the barracks of the 92nd Coast Artillery (PS) were set on fire by a hostile bombing attack the below named officers and enlisted men, without regard for personal danger and while hostile planes were overhead, on their own initiative, outstandingly assisted in getting the fire under control thus preventing complete destruction of buildings and defense installations in the area. The explosion of small arms and other ammunition stored in the area greatly increased the hazardous fire fighting operations.

Discovering at daybreak that a large number of enemy forces had broken through our front lines and were moving toward our positions from the rear, Private First Class LaMontagne, with his party, attempted to warn the infantry of the impending peril and, when attacked by a group of Japanese, killed three of the enemy and dispersed the remainder, thereafter proceeding under heavy small arms fire to the infantry lines. As the Japanese attacked from several directions, he fought courageously with rifle and grenades, materially assisting in repulsing the enemy, and subsequently, although struck by a mortar fragment while voluntarily accompanying casualties across an open area to the battalion aid station, steadfastly maintained his position and provided accurate and effective covering fire for his companions until fatally wounded by another mortar shell. FIRST LIEUTENANT JOHN H. LANDEN,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Communications Officer of the Fourth Battalion, Eleventh Marines, First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Peleliu, Palau Islands, 15 September 1944. Landing on Peleliu shortly after the assault waves, First Lieutenant Landen was engaged in reconnoitering the Battalion positions when his party came under fire from a well-concealed, hostile machine gun. Organizing a small group, he personally directed a tank against the enemy weapon and was responsible for the destruction of the hostile gun and its crew. Later, when enemy troops opened fire from a pillbox on the Battalion landing, he joined in the assault on this position armed only with a pistol and, despite wounds sustained during this action, continued to participate in the attack, thereby aiding materially in the destruction of the hostile entrenchment and in annihilating its occupants. His indomitable fighting spirit, efficient leadership and courageous devotion to duty in the face of enemy fire reflect great credit on First Lieutenant Landen and the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as a Rifle Platoon Leader of Company K, Third Battalion, Twenty-First Marines, Third Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces at Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, from 21 to 24 February 1945. Courageously leading his platoon in a daring strike against the heavily fortified, deeply entrenched enemy on Motoyama Airfield Number Two, Second Lieutenant Lane boldly pressed forward against fanatic hostile resistance, fighting furiously despite the overwhelming odds and wiping out twelve Japanese pillboxes to extend the line of advance to the edge of the field. Undaunted by the continued shelling, he promptly reorganized his platoon and prepared to push the attack across the fire-swept airstrip and, constantly exposing himself to the withering barrage as he directed his men to the objective, staunchly continued his forward drive until fatally struck down by a bursting shell. Inspired by his forceful leadership, valiant spirit and unwavering zeal, Second Lieutenant Lane's intrepid men relentlessly laid down terrific supporting shellfire against the enemy flank, enabling the adjacent company to move forward and thereby contributing to the success of our forces in capturing this vital hostile stronghold. His fearless conduct and self-sacrificing devotion to duty throughout the bitter engagement reflect the highest credit upon Second Lieutenant Lane and the United States Naval Service. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with the Second Amphibian Tractor Battalion, Second Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Tarawa, Gilbert Islands, 20 November 1943. After disembarking assault troops on the heavily fortified beachhead on D-Day, Private First Class Lane boldly returned to the edge of a treacherous coral reef to assist other units halted in the water by the enemy's concentrated shellfire. Using his tractor as a shield by driving between the gunfire and the troops, he effectively covered their advance to shore and, at the same time, skillfully manned his vehicle's mounted machine gun to deliver destructive return fire against the fanatic Japanese. Upon reaching the beach, he dauntlessly continued in the fight, providing overhead fire for oncoming troops until his tractor was completely demolished by a bursting Japanese shell. By his prompt and daring action, his great personal valor and zealous devotion to duty in the face of tremendous odds, Private First Class Lane contributed materially to the success of our forces in capturing this vital hostile stronghold and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

CITATION FOR SILVER STAR

(POSTHUMOUS)

Major Harry Cox Lang, Commanding Officer, Company A, Fourth Marines, displayed conspicuous gallantry on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, from April to May 1942. Despite daily artillery bombardments and frequent air attacks, he courageously exposed himself in the course of his daily visits to all positions, thus contributing materially to strengthening of morale and esprit among his men to meet the subsequent landings on 5 May, when he met his death while directing the action. His conduct reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Marine Corps.

PRIVATE FIRST CLASS ROBERT G. LAUDERMAN, USMCR.,
for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as member of a Scout Sniper Platoon serving with the Second Marines, Second Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Saipan, Marianas Islands, from 15 June to 9 July 1944. When a sudden vicious onslaught was launched against his unit's position and eight Japanese infantrymen infiltrated a vital sector of the line, Private First Class Lauderman immediately engaged the enemy soldiers in fierce hand-to-hand combat, fighting with determined aggressiveness until he was mortally wounded. By his daring initiative and great personal courage in the face of grave peril, Private First Class Lauderman was materially responsible for preventing a major break-through of lines at a strategic point, and his valiant conduct throughout was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life for his country."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as a Platoon Guide, serving with Company G, Third Battalion, Twenty-Sixth Marines, Fifth Marine Division, during operations on enemy Japanese-held Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, 24 February 1945. When his platoon sergeant and platoon leader became casualties, Sergeant Laudisio immediately took charge and ran from cover to cover under heavy enemy machine-gun and sniper fire, placing the men and machine guns in more favorable positions. Running to the aid of one of his squad leaders struck down by hostile machine-gun fire, Sergeant Laudisio dragged the wounded man into a shell hole and, although mortally wounded during this action, refused aid for himself until all efforts to save his companion had failed. With his platoon pinned down by fierce and concentrated fire from well-concealed enemy positions while advancing toward its objective, Corporal Laughter fearlessly exposed himself to the savage barrage to proceed alone to a more strategic position and pour a steady stream of deadly fire into one of the camouflaged hostile emplacements, completely destroying the strong point and killing the ten Japanese within. Carrying on his determined assault despite relentless opposition, he unhesitatingly pressed forward to the top of the ridge and continued to deliver his accurate, effective fire into other enemy positions until he fell, fatally wounded. By his expert marksmanship, indomitable fighting spirit and cool courage under fire, Corporal Laughter had contributed materially to the success of his platoon in accomplishing their assigned mission and to the ultimate capture of this vital Japanese stronghold. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with the Third Battalion, Eighth Marines, Second Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Tinian, Marianas Islands, 31 July 1944. Upon returning from a voluntary patrol to locate points of resistance in hostile territory, Corporal Lavezzo found that one of the men had been wounded and a tank stopped by heavy Japanese machine-gun and rifle fire. Unhesitatingly rushing into an open field under withering enemy fire, he dragged the wounded man to a position of comparative safety behind the disabled tank, valiantly remaining with his companion and the crippled tank to give covering fire until reinforcements arrived. Unselfishly disregarding his own safety throughout, Corporal Lavezzo was fatally wounded 2 August while trying to neutralize a cave. patched two runners to the rear for reinforcements.
With each man killed in turn before traversing

the mission himself and, although surrounded by

During the offensive action of his battalion, First Lieutenant Lawton displayed superb tactical skill in the handling of his company, both in the approach to and during contact with the Japanese. Ordered to move his company from its position on the left of the regimental assault line in order to cut off a hostile battalion which was holding up the right flank of his regiment, he maneuvered into position, cut the enemy's communication lines and secured the break by setting up a back-to-back defense on a two-hundred-yard front. When the Japanese, as a result, launched a strong counterattack from both east and west, First Lieutenant Lawton's company, with the aid of artillery and machine gun fire, successfully repulsed the assault and maintained its position until relieved. After a hand grenade attack by eighteen Japanese soldiers was repulsed at extremely close range, the wounded were successfully loaded aboard the tractor which could only be backed out of the narrow defile in which it was lodged. Realizing it was necessary for someone to guide the vehicle operator in the backward movement, Sergeant LeClair unhesitatingly placed himself atop the tractor's bow and guided it a distance of one hundred yards until the terrain permitted it to turn and proceed to friendly lines where the wounded were given medical treatment. In addition to guiding the tractor which had become a target of opportunity for enemy artillery during its precarious trip, he killed several of the Japanese who attempted to disable the slow-moving vehicle with hand grenades. CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Crewman of an Amphibian Tractor with the Ninth Amphibian Tractor Battalion, Fleet Marine Force, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Okinawa, Ryukyu Islands, 14 May 1945. When the enemy counter-attacked and regained ground on which twelve wounded Marines were lying, Private First Class Lehman volunteered to aid in the evacuation of the wounded by amphibian tractor. Crossing enemy lines in the face of intense fire, he effectively repelled immediate attack by enemy troops as he assisted in bringing the casualties aboard the tractor and returning them to our lines. His courage and devotion to duty reflect the highest credit upon Private First Class Lehman and the United States Naval Service."

With utter disregard for his own personal safety, Second Lieutenant Leidel, on numerous occasions, led his men up over an extremely dangerous ridge in the face of heavy Japanese machine-gun fire, and inflicted heavy casualties upon the enemy. By his outstanding bravery and indomitable fighting spirit, he inspired marines throughout his battalion with a desire to accompany him on these hazardous missions. During the last patrol under his charge, Second Lieutenant Leidel, although wounded, successfully attacked a hostile position, using captured hand grenades against the enemy, and seized a flag and valuable notebooks from Japanese who had been killed in foxholes along the line of his withdrawal. Observing two casualties from another battalion lying in exposed positions about one hundred yards in front of the lines, he commandeered a tank and, advancing under the tank's covering fire, made his way through the fire-swept area to the aid of the two men. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while attached to the Second Battalion, Fourth Marines, Reinforced, First Provisional Marine Brigade, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Grote Peninsula, Guam, on 28 July 1944. With his platoon pinned down by intense hostile mortar, machine-gun and rifle fire during an extremely hazardous advance against the enemy, First Lieutenant Leonard repeatedly pressed forward of our lines in the face of the withering barrage to locate the heavily fortified, deeply entrenched hostile emplacements. Then, making his way back to his own lines, he boldly led his platoon in vigorous, intensive attacks against fanatic and fiercely determined enemy resistance until fatally struck down by hostile fire. The President of the United States takes pride in presenting the SILVER STAR MEDAL posthumously to

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with the Second Battalion, Ninth Marines, Third Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces at Guam, Marianas Islands, the afternoon of 25 July 1944. With his platoon disorganized and forced to withdraw following a relentless, determined enemy counterattack, Private First Class Leuver steadfastly remained in the front lines with two other members of his fire group to prevent the Japanese from reorganizing for another strike. Boldly facing the withering hostile barrage, he delivered effective fire against the Japanese, covering the withdrawal of his platoon to a position approximately 100 yards to the rear and enabling them to set up a defensive position for the night. Although mortally wounded during the fierce action, Private First Class Leuver, by his fearless determination and vallant fighting spirit, had contributed materially to the success of our forces in this area, and his dauntless courage in the face of grave peril was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life for his country."

When his tank was rendered out of action by a Bangalor torpedo explosion and heavy automatic fire during an assault on a well-fortified ridge, Private First Class Leverington moved forward alone and turned his flame thrower directly into the entrance of a cave fortification, thereby saving the lives of many of his comrades. Although wounded when a demolition explosion from an adjacent cave blew him completely off his feet, he ran back to get another flame thrower and returned to bring additional fire to bear on the cave. CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while attached to the Third Marine Raider Battalion during a landing on Puruata Island, Solomon Islands, November 1, 1943. Informed that two severely wounded Marines were lying in an enemy position, Captain Levit promptly organized a rescue party and, although fully aware that this area would soon be fired upon by friendly artillery, proceeded into the hazardous zone. Unhesitatingly advancing under fire, he succeeded in evacuating the man who had not yet succumbed to his injuries. Captain Levit's great personal valor and courageous initiative in the face of grave peril were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

As a member of the shore party, Gunnery Sergeant Lewis landed on D-Day amidst natural obstacles and enemy artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire which precluded moving supplies inland and caused congestion on the beach, preventing proper disposal of accumulated supplies of artillery, ammunition and gasoline. When a shell added on the beach dump during an enemy barrage, starting a fire and exploding the ammunition, he ignored the hazard of the explosions and the continuing enemy artillery fire and, mounting a tractor-dozzer, pushed sand on the flaming and exploding ammunition, thereby efficiently bringing the fire under control to save vital supplies and reduce the danger to personnel in the area. His outstanding courage and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Leading his company in a hazardous assault on a strongly-fortified hill north of Motoyama Airfield Number Three, Captain Lewis braved enemy machine-gun and mortar fire to make a detailed reconnaissance of the terrain and to place supporting tanks in the most advantageous firing positions. Employing a radio and working from an exposed observation post in close proximity to the tanks, he then directed the tanks in destroying five large-caliber Japanese guns, thus enabling his men to cross the airfield and gain a foothold on the objective with a minimum of casualties and without the loss of a single tank. Still exposed to heavy enemy fire, he skillfully directed the subsequent action of his assault units, moving from one platoon to another to contact the Platoon Leaders, until seriously wounded by hostile machine-gun fire. By his outstanding leadership and coolness under fire, Captain Lewis served as an inspiration to his men and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

As a member of the first combat patrol to scale Mount Suribachi, he courageously carried his flame thrower up the steep slopes and assisted in destroying the occupants of the many caves found in the rim of the volcano, some of which contained as many as seventy Japanese. While engaged in an attack on hostile cave positions on March 1, he fearlessly exposed himself to accurate enemy fire and was subsequently wounded and evacuated. CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Language Officer of the Intelligence Section of the First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Peleliu, Palau Islands, on 10 October 1944. Voluntarily requesting and gaining permission to enter fiercely-defended enemy territory in order to obtain the surrender of a large number of Koreans reported to be in caves in front of our lines, Second Lieutenant Linton risked ambush by entering and exploring two caves of great depth. Encountering two groups of Koreans who could have cut him off from aid if they had chosen to attack him, he employed his fluent command of the Korean language and, through skillful persuasion, effected the surrender of both groups. Conducting the entire group of forty-nine back through our lines, Second Lieutenant Linton obtained information from these prisoners which proved to be of material intelligence value to our forces. His skill, initiative and courageous devotion to duty in the face of grave personal danger reflect great credit on Second Lieutenant Linton and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with Company K, Third Battalion, Twenty-fifth Marines, Fourth Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Saipan, Marianas Islands, 6 July 1944. Acting as Platoon Leader when his unit suffered heavy casualties during an extremely bitter fire-fight with the enemy, Corporal Linzenbold, despite a serious wound received during the early stages of the action, applied a battle dressing and returned to the fight. Determined to carry out the mission, he fearlessly led his men through heavy machine-gun and rifle fire to an advantageous striking position and, delivering a devastating attack, personally accounted for twelve of the Japanese. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as a Platoon Leader of Company K, Third Battalion, Twenty-fifth Marines, Fourth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, 19 February 1945. Landing on a beach which was subjected to a blanketing barrage of hostile mortar, rocket, artillery and machine-gun fire, Second Lieutenant Linzenbold immediately reorganized his platoon and courageously led it through devastating machine-gun fire to its assigned position. After learning that all officers in his company senior to him had become casualties, he assumed command under the most hazardous conditions of combat and, handicapped by the loss of his radio, made his way across fire-swept terrain to the command post of an adjacent unit where he communicated information concerning the tactical situation to his commanding officer. After returning to his company, Second Lieutenant Linzenbold personally led his men in an assault against a large hostile pillbox which had been delivering fire which impeded the advance of his landing team and, although painfully wounded, continued to lead the company until the enemy position was destroyed and its occupants killed. His leadership, initiative and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

When contact was lost with an adjacent battalion during an enemy night attack and the assault platoons were suffering heavy casualties under a fierce concentration of hostile mortar and machine-gun fire, Second Lieutenant Lipscomb organized a group of nineteen men from the 81-mm. mortar platoon to fill the gap. Leading his men forward in the dark, exposed to both enemy and friendly fire, he skillfully deployed his small force, reestablishing contact in sufficient time to repel a strong enemy infiltration attempt. Although repeated fanatic Japanese counterattacks during the night seriously depleted his small command and caused the loss of contact again with friendly flank elements, Second Lieutenant Lipscomb stoutly maintained his position until dawn, when he cleared his sector of the enemy and consolidated his line with friendly forces. By his courageous initiative and leadership, he contributed materially to the neutralization of enemy resistance in that zone of action, and his diligent devotion to duty was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while serving with Marine Fighting Squadron TWO TWENTY-FOUR during the bombardment of Henderson Field, Guadalcanal, Solomon Islands, by enemy Japanese surface and air forces on the night of October 13-14, 1942. When a heavy enemy shell struck dangerously close to a bomb shelter, burying five marines under a mass of earth and debris, Private First Class Long, hearing cries for help, voluntarily exposed himself to the intense fire of hostile shells and bombs and, with several other men, set to work rescuing his imprisoned comrades. Due to the quick thinking and heroic efforts of Private First Class Long and his companions, two of the buried men were saved, and the bodies of the other three marines were recovered. His unswerving devotion to duty was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Mortar Platoon Leader of the Second Battalion, Twenty-fifth Marines, Fourth Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Iwo Jima, Volcano Islands, 1 March 1945. When a faulty round of ammunition exploded in one of his mortar tubes causing heavy casualties and setting fire to two large ammunition dumps, First Lieutenant Long quickly administered first aid to a wounded comrade within thirty yards of the burning piles and, although wounded himself, evacuated the man to safety. With shrapnel falling over the entire area, he supervised his men in fire-fighting, thereby averting disaster by preventing the blaze from spreading to other ammunition piles. Immediately after the explosions ceased and the fires were extinguished, he reorganized the platoon to direct it to a new firing position. By his brilliant tactics, First Lieutenant Longbotham permitted the further advance of his company and held casualties from the intense enemy fire to a minimum. When a devastating barrage of hostile fire emanating from heavily fortified, well-concealed pillboxes and caves pinned down his entire battalion, Warrant Officer Looney boldly charged forward under the blistering shellfire and, directing one of his guns to an elevated position for training against the emplacements, delivered a deadly rain of fire to destroy four cave entrenchments, three pillboxes and a large caliber dual-purpose gun. Then, placing himself at the head of the infantry, he courageously led them forward, at the same time pointing out targets of opportunity for his own gunners and preventing them from firing on advancing friendly troops. Fatally struck down by a vicious shellburst as he continued his daring tactics, Warrant Officer Looney, by his forceful leadership, indomitable fighting spirit and steadfast determination in the face of tremendous odds, had served as an inspiration to his men in overrunning the positions and enabling his unit to reach its objective in the sustained drive to capture the island. "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Leader of a Regimental Weapons Platoon attached to the Sixth Marines, Second Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces at Saipan, Marianas Islands, on 15 and 16 June 1944. With his platoon units disembarked at various points on the heavily fortified beach, First Lieutenant Love boldly faced concentrated enemy artillery, machine-gun and mortar fire to reorganize his men and, fearlessly proceeding across fire-swept areas, personally guided them to a designated area. Immediately leading his platoon into action, he fought valiantly against a fanatic enemy, contributing essentially to the success of the landing and the expeditious establishment of the beachhead. When Japanese forces launched a counterattack against the sector held by his unit the following day, First Lieutenant Love skillfully deployed his men for maximum effectiveness and, accurately directing their gunfire, succeeded in repelling the vicious onslaught. Despite serious wounds received during the action which subsequently proved fatal, First Lieutenant Love, by his brilliant leadership and indomitable fighting spirit, had served as an inspiring example to all members of his platoon, and his unwavering devotion to duty throughout was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. CORPORAL NORMAN B. LOVELACE,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with the Third Battalion, Second Marines, Second Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Tarawa, Gilbert Islands, 20 November 1943. Fearlessly proceeding with his assault battalion in a relentless drive against the enemy during fierce hostilities on D-Day, Corporal Lovelace bravely faced the enemy's concentrated shellfire to attack and destroy two heavily fortified strong points. Fighting valiantly despite the tremendous odds, he continued to perform his duties skillfully and with unremitting courage until wounded in the right shoulder by a bursting Japanese shell and forced to evacuate the area. By his dauntless perseverance, outstanding fortitude and steadfast devotion to the completion of each perilous mission, Corporal Lovelace contributed materially to the success of our forces in capturing this vital hostile stronghold and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving with Company C, First Battalion, Eighteenth Marines (Engineer) Second Marine Division, during action against enemy Japanese forces at Tarawa, Gilbert Islands, on 20 November 1943. Landing a bulldozer tractor with the assistance of another Marine during fierce hostilities on D-Day, Private First Class Lovett skillfully drove to the beach despite the enemy's shattering machine-gun and sniper fire and boldly pressed forward to crush heavily fortified enemy positions during the initial stages of the battle. Continuing his same daring tactics later in the action, he fearlessly countered bitter hostile resistance to pioneer enemy infested roads, effect repairs for our advancing forces and transport sleds of vital ammunition to our troops on the opposite side of the fire-swept airstrip. By his dauntless perseverance, unwavering determination and cool courage in the face of grave danger, Private First Class Lovett contributed materially to the success of our operations against this important Japanese stronghold and his zealous devotion to duty throughout was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Assuming the duties of the platoon hospital corpsman when he became a casualty during an assault on hostile emplacements, Sergeant Lowe administered first aid to the corpsman and continued to lead the attack as well as care for the wounded under his command. With his platoon pinned down by murderous machine-gun and mortar barrages, he proceeded under the intense cross-fire to a wounded Marine lying forward of the front lines, rendered medical assistance and carried the helpless man to a place of safety. Although wounded while rescuing his comrades, he led an aggressive attack against the enemy and later rushed into a machine-gun fire lane to help three more seriously wounded men. Refusing medical attention for himself when he sustained a second wound, Sergeant Lowe continued to care for the others, struggling until he died saving the lives of his fallen comrades. When he was blinded and wounded by a Japanese mortar shell, he ordered his men not to come to his aid because of the heavy fire. By his fortitude, coolness and unselfish devotion to duty, Corporal Lynch upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

The President of the United States takes pleasure in presenting the SILVER STAR MEDAL to

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Leader of a 75-mm. Gun Crew serving with the Third Battalion, Seventh Marines, First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces on Cape Gloucester, New Britain, January 3-4, 1944. When his battalion was heavily fired upon by enemy rifle, machine-gun and mortar fire from strongly fortified hostile positions during an attempted night river crossing, Private First Class Lynch directed and controlled his gun through unfamiliar, tangled jungle, bringing the weapon to a position from which it was fired at point blank range, destroying enemy emplacements and guns and enabling the battalion to advance. Private First Class Lynch's daring aggressiveness and inspiring courage under fire were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

The President of the United States takes pleasure
in presenting the SILVER STAR MEDAL to

CORPORAL WILLIAM J. LYNCH,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE,

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Machine Gun Squad Leader of Company A, First Battalion, First Marines, First Marine Division, in action against enemy Japanese forces at Peleliu, Palau Islands, on 17 September 1944. During an attack against coral cliff strongly fortified by entrenched hostile troops, Corporal Lynch's company boldly charged across the open slopes and received deadly enemy cross-fire which inflicted heavy casualties and forced his company to withdraw to a covered area. Instead of falling back with the others, Corporal Lynch courageously rushed his squad forward in a desperate attempt to neutralize the hostile fire and, from a position half-way up the ridge, delivered effective fire which enabled his company to reorganize and advance to its objective with a minimum number of casualties. His daring initiative, coolness and aggressive fighting spirit under heavy fire were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

PRIVATE FIRST CLASS RONDELL LYONS, U. S. MARINE CORPS,
for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

Revised

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity while a member of the Second Battalion, Second Marines, Reinforced, during action against enemy Japanese forces on Guadalcanal, Solomon Islands, on November 10, 1942.
During an engagement in the Matanikau and Pora Rivers Area, Private First Class Lyons led his squad through heavy hostile machine gun fire in order to reach his position. Later, with cool courage and utter disregard for his own personal safety, he crossed a grassy knoll which was dangerously exposed; twice to rescue wounded comrades, and a third time to carry water to them from a hole which was under continuous Japanese fire. His heroic conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

For the President,

FRANK KNOX

Secretary of the Navy.
